

A NEW APPROACH TO HEALING

Human Genetic Therapy

Author: Dr. Alex Tanous

INTRODUCTION:

Every living cell contains coded genes. A gene is a small element within a chromosome concerned with the transmission and development of hereditary characteristics and traits.

It is in the study of genetics that we will be able to see through the evolutionary transformation, the potential and probable future of the human race.

In my understanding, genes have a memory which can be active or non-active. I call this genetic memory.

For example: when a sperm fertilizes an egg, the genes of both parents now interact in the newly conceived child. Once the genetic memory has become active, it will give the child it's characteristics and traits, such as color of eyes, hair, structure etc. Moreover, it will pass on the diseases, or weakness as well as strengths, talents and its mission and role of each human being for the future perfection of the human race.

Moreover, I strongly hold that within the genetic memory we find an inherited consciousness. It is activated when the genetic memory is awakened by networking among the genes and moves the person towards personal and universal goals for the perfection of the race and the universe.

The networking between the genetic memory and the inherited consciousness awakens in each person the "unfinished business" of all the past which must be fulfilled. This is also coded in our genes.

II.

GENETIC MEMORY:

We have seen in a limited way the scientific discoveries about the genes. Since this information is already available to anyone, I do not wish to dwell on this but rather to move on in explaining my insights in regards to genetic memory.

What is genetic memory? I believe that the genes carry in themselves the movement of the whole. By this I mean all experiences from the dawn of time is coded in our genes. As we have hereditary characteristics and traits we also have inherited the code of all experiences.

In the coded genetic memory of our experiences is enfolded the wholeness of the potential of the future. By enfold, I mean that it is contained in the gene and when all is in the right place or harmonizes the enfolded wholeness will unfold and wholeness and creativity will take place. But the creativity will depend on the "unfinished business". We will see more of this later.

Genetic memory has infinite knowledge to release so it can create the future. But in the same wholeness it has total knowledge of the past which must be accounted for.

Any experience which has not fulfilled itself, will have to have another chance. If a person who wanted to be an artist three or four generations ago and was limited, the genetic memory will activate this through the inherited consciousness and an artist will be born to fulfill according to the potential of the unfinished work. This can go on from generation to generation until the inherited consciousness and the universal consciousness agree that the destiny has been fulfilled.

The genetic memory which is inactive, when activated through the vibration of experiences happening to the person will also awaken the inherited consciousness which will illuminate consciously or unconsciously its goal. The genes from generation to generation code how much of the unfinished business has been worked out.

As new networking takes place by the birth of a person, it knows the right time for the vibrations which sends messages. This creates movement of the whole and the person is awakened to fulfill the unfinished business.

INHERITED CONSCIOUSNESS:

The inherited consciousness which I hold is also coded in the genetic memory as in a computer and when the right cosmic time is presented it will motivate and place before the person all that person needs to fulfill the unfinished business. In other words, through the inherited consciousness, the genetic memory is activated and by the power it has, informs the person of the unfinished business unconsciously. (Is it always unconscious?) 3

Through the inherited consciousness distant knowledge of the past as well as the future and the immediate is presented as a wholeness for perfection. Each person, no matter what the person does, becomes significant in the achievement of goals toward the whole of the universal consciousness.

As we evolve, we activate the unformed energy we need and through the genetic memory and the inherited consciousness (have) created (for) the universe (a step) towards its goal and everything that is in it.

In the inherited consciousness we must also understand there is an inherited memory (see my note--or is the word meaning). I must make it clear that for me memory is in the law. By law I mean that the striving for perfection is fulfilled. As we evolve we realize that memory is infinite, therefore, incomplete because in memory (can be) contained the potential future. Furthermore, in all of this we become aware that what I am saying is that everything has a non-local consciousness. It only becomes local when it is creative and visible.

It is important to realize that the light within the self and the self-consciousness causes our mind to evolve towards perfection by the power of the will. It is the will which is the driving force by which one accepts or non-accepts (or rejects) the goals we strive for.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS:

I have been speaking of unfinished business. What does it mean?

We and the universe have the same goals given to all. This is perfection of all things. The means by which it is fulfilled is different for each person. I must point out that the universe itself has an inherited consciousness from the universal consciousness which it must strive and fulfill through all of nature.

We are human beings standing in the center of the Cosmic conscience. It is through our evolution that the unfinished business will be accomplished and perfected.

Since goals cannot be all fulfilled in one lifetime of a person, (Since goals cannot be all fulfilled in the lifetime of one person, sounds less like reincarnation! o.k?), the genetic memory and the inherited consciousness pour on genetically from one generation to another all the unfinished business for perfection.

Each person contributes toward the goal of perfection. A child is born. The genes of the two people converge, stabilize and informs the new being. The inherited consciousness (from the beginning of time) which is also present produces through the evolution of the person a transformation by a genetic sequence and enhances the activity of the genetic memory contained in the genes. It brings forth the inherited consciousness of the unfinished business which is information contained in the genes. This gives rise to higher consciousness to (within) the person. The person becomes a creative and producing human being.

As I have said before, in the genes everything is enfolded. In its destined time and place it unfolds through the inherited consciousness of the unfinished business, then it converges and presents to the person their potential future.

When the person accepts, (which he/she has the freedom to accept or reject)((that one is yours)), the potential future, the genetic memory and the inherited consciousness unfolds and creativity is born.

HEALING THE GENETIC MEMORY:

The way to heal the genetic memory is through human genetic therapy. Healing is not done through medicine alone but is done by changing the attitudes, fears etc which cause the illness of the person. (I may have slight changes in this sentence -where you had marked through some).

I have said that every human cell contains a coded gene. It also contains the potential of all illness and problems of the person. In the same token it contains the total healing and not just a temporary cure.

Working for over a decade with people with different illness and problems, I have come to accept the following: some of the problems, illness, fears, etc. are passed on through the genes as are other things already believe are passed on through the genes, therefore, we all have genetic memory. (I would re-write this sentence as--"I have come to accept as fact that some of the problems, illness, fears, etc. are passed on through the genes the same as the other traits and patterns now recognized as being passed on in this way, therefore, we all have a genetic memory.)

I assume that the problems that we find in a person today are not new, but rather through the experience the person has the problem is activated through the genetic memory and inherited consciousness.

The problems, I am led to believe, are passed on from generation to generation as another phase of the unfinished business.

It is also my belief that one carries the problems through the concept of attitudes which is also coded in the genetic memory. This attitude is unconscious but the result of the attitude manifests itself consciously in different ways.

It is the attitude which is unconscious which disposes the person to their problems. This I see as all related to the unfinished business of the distant past immediate past which manifests itself in the present.

In my research, I found that one of the major problems which has caused the disorder in the person is that the person was never given permission by parents or anyone. (Should you say permission for what? because too permissive may have really caused big problems for themselves and other people.) I also saw when the person took permission and went against the authority the person gave themselves fear, guilt, illness etc.

My research also points out that if a person was not given permission to be well, the person would not get well. If it was best (how best?) for the person to be ill, the person would become ill, because they took permission to do so. It is most likely for an unconscious reason from the genetic memory.

The way to heal the person, or for the person to heal themselves, is by giving them permission (or the desire or will?) to be well.

If the permission (determination or desire) of being in good health is not corrected the genetic memory will carry it to the following generations which will be disposed and susceptible to the illness, fears, guilt etc.

The corrective procedure for any problem or illness is best worked with in human genetic therapy.

HUMAN GENETIC THERAPY:

What is human genetic therapy? How does it differ from other therapy? How successful is it?

When one is working with human genetic therapy, the person must always work hand in hand with a person in the medical field, if the patient is under medical care. The human genetic therapist has no right to trespass his or her field and enter into the domain of medicine. By doing so it adds to the problems and the healing may never take place.

I look at medicine as a bridge to which we will bring holistic healing. No one, in my opinion, except those in medical authority have the right to tell the patient not to take medicine if it has been prescribed by the doctor.

What is human genetic therapy? It is not new. Only the method is different and its approach is different, depending on each case.

There are several ways in which one can work with human genetic therapy. It can be done with a single person or in a group. I have found the group session extremely more powerful because we all share in our genetic memory and we all become like mirrors. In some way our inherited consciousness activates the genetic memory and we all identify with our problems as a whole. This is where healing begins.

My approach has been in three ways. One: I play selected music which will arouse in the person images, color, symbols etc. The people (patient) read these back to me. I in turn, through my clairvoyant intuition see things the person does not see. I am able to connect all the pieces for them.

Second, through the same method, I help them recall at a certain age and as far back as the womb, when the problem started. It is not just an age regression that takes place. It is a combination of what the patient recalls and the help I can give the patient with my clairvoyant intuition.

Some have completely erased all memory from conception to five years old and through the intuitive clairvoyant mode I resurrect with them the genetic memory which is the base line of their problem or problems. By the same method, I find how it was passed on from generation to generation if this procedure is necessary.

In the intuitive clairvoyant mode, we examine carefully the attitudes, permission, fear, guilt, etc which took place at the time of the person's experience (which we are investigating.) In this manner it takes us further into the problem and we, the patient and I, are both sharing the power of our intuitive clairvoyant mode to heal. (Do you think doctors might like "alpha/theta level" here because of the scientific testing published in relation to Bio-feedback? It is a now a scientific fact that healing takes place faster at 10 1/2 cycles alpha.) Everyone in the group also participates.

The procedure is not a simple one. One has to work on several levels of consciousness at the same time. (We must work with:)

1. the present situation.
2. the base line of the experience the person had. In other words, what unconscious memory must one bring to the present to show to the person what they did not understand in the experience.
3. One must also examine if the problem was a genetic transmission through the genetic memory.

Once we have arrived at the problem, I must make my patient understand that the experience was not according to nature, and the bio-computer recorded it that way and it was accepted by the genetic code.

The healing process takes place when the person understands what was not understood at the time. The person then rewrites the experience (and their reaction to it) as it should have happened, therefore, the bio-computer corrects the information and computerizes the right information.

In this human genetic therapy, people ask: "Are you not lying to yourself when you right the wrong by what it said in the experience the way nature intended it to be?" (Not quite clear. Should it be "right the wrong by mentally picturing it corrected?")

The answer is "no". You are not lying to yourself. What we have to do and are doing is sending information to the bio-computer to send a message to the genetic memory that you understand. You understand it happened that way, but also you understand that it was not the right way. So by rewriting the experience one informs the genetic memory and it understands the way it should be and computerizes it, so that it will harmonize the next experience which might have caused a problem will not cause a problem. It would have been corrected. We will work an example of this later. (Or is it--We will give an example of this work later.?)

SUMMARY:

The summary to what I have been proposing is this. One sends a message to the genetic memory via the bio-computer (or human brain). The inherited consciousness activates the information by making itself present to the person. The person corrects the information, but as the person's understanding and attitudes change a healing takes place. It is not a cure (can we change cure to remission--cures are supposed to be permanent) which would be for the immediate only. A healing of the whole person--mind, body and spirit is now in progress. It is a holistic healing.

Through this change that takes place in the person, all distant past is healed and the immediate present as well as the distant future because now all is rectified and corrected by the power of the will of (and the) understanding and acceptance.

The person in this experience informs the total self of the past, and understands why certain experiences happen and why it caused the problem or problems. But by the power of the will it is now corrected and understood.

No longer does the person place the blame on another, but rather accepts the responsibility of correcting the problem. Neither does the patient carry any guilt in this process.

First: The person begins by forgiving themselves for not understanding.

Second: The person accepts themselves where they are and who they are, and what happened to make him or her the way they are.

Third: Through the power of the will the person accepts all positive energy of the past, and the person cuts off all the negative energy of the past. This is simple. It is done by an act of the will through acceptance, change of attitude and the will to be healed.

Fourth: Once the person has made a conversion through the power of the will, the person must fulfill what they said they would do. Not to do it weakens the will and the striving to heal takes longer since the person lied to themselves by saying: "I will do" something and then not doing it.

Fifth: After a person has forgiven themselves for not understanding, accepts themselves, and cuts their negative past, the person now must set goals --short or long--for the future. These goals must be carried out. As I have said: "They must be willing to die for their goals." In other words, they cannot change their mind. But a person may add more things to their goals or adjust things, but one cannot compromise with their goals.

Sixth: To say "I will" means exactly that. I cannot say I desire, I wish, or I hope because behind these statements lie doubt that the goal can be fulfilled.

This is contingent on what the genetic memory holds for the person from the distant knowledge of the past which must be accomplished for a universal future. What destiny must fulfill from the timeless, spaceless, and non-local must be placed in the immediate present of time, space and local. The unfinished business is accomplished when the immediate knowledge informs the person what it must do.

Until the point where visible creativity takes place what the person possesses is unformed energy carried from the past which he or she utilizes in the right time and place.

A number of questions are asked. "First, if one is not capable of creativity what happens to that person?" There are two kinds of creativity--subjective and objective. In subjective creativity the person acts for his or her self and responds to the inherited consciousness of the unfinished business. If a person is not able to respond, another responds to the needs of the other person, for example taking care of the person, feeding the person etc. In that manner also answers to the summons of fulfilling the unfinished business of the other. For the call is that through the other person one does fulfill the unfinished business of two people.

A second question is also asked. "If a person dies without passing on his or her unfinished work--or if the couple have one child and that one has no children, what happens to the fulfilling of the unfinished business?"(did I write what you meant?) It is my understanding in the wholeness of the universal consciousness, where the vision of the potential future is seen and how it will be fulfilled, concessions have been made for these people. Nothing is lost. Since all genetic memory of everything is contained in each one of us. Each is the mirror of the other. Nothing is lost. The genetic networking takes care of this and all falls into place.

THE APPLICATION OF HUMAN GENETIC THERAPY:

I will now discuss cases (on which) I have worked (with) healing through the human genetic therapy.

CASE ONE--THE PROBLEM:

David, age 29, came to me because he felt he was going to die. He was a successful business man. Moreover, his personal life did not have much meaning. This is all the information David wanted to share.

In the human genetic therapy group, David read to us what was presented to him through the music. The scene he saw was brief but the emotions were intense.

What he said was that he saw darkness and was uncomfortable. He sensed that he was dying. Then, he saw a dark tunnel with a light. Again the sense of death was strong and the emotions high.

I immediately realized that David was living an experience in the womb and the birth.

I asked David to close his eyes and project himself back into the womb. It was hard and painful, because something in his memory would not allow it.

I kept gently saying to him, "David it is now four months before you are born. (This is where my intuitive clairvoyant mode entered.) Your mother is"--I stopped for him to answer.

He started speaking: "She is stopping what she is doing because she felt, as well as the doctor, that I was going to die. She is receiving treatment for cancer. If she goes on I will die, but she loves me and she doesn't want me to die. She is told there is no choice for her to make. The Catholic church really made the decision. When it is the choice between the mother and the child, the child must be saved over the mother." (This was the case at the time David was born.)

"She stopped the cancer treatment. She knew she was going to die. I can feel the loss. Why must she die? She is my mother. She leaves me and is sad. I am sad. I've been sad. That is why I am sad; that is why I fear death. That's why I fear loss, and she was 29--the same age I am."

The genetic memory through the music is made present to David. We see an age power here which David had not seen.

It was clear to me that unconsciously David also blamed his father. He never accepted his stepmother from the age of three months which was when David's mother died. (Did he have a stepmother that soon?)

In recalling (the experience) from the genetic memory, the experience, we saw that David from the womb on had created an attitude by which he felt he was going to die and (had) no meaning (or reason) to live.

This was most probably the attitude of his mother which was unconscious, and working unconsciously caused the problems.

David lived all his experience and emotions and what decisions he made in the course of his pre-birth and after birth, which was his way to survive. Once this was present and he was made to understand that he did not understand the experience at the time and now he did. (he could make a different decision.)

What I had him do, is rewrite the experience now in a positive way. (He was to see it) the way it should have been if his mother did not have cancer or had treatment for it, and had not died.

Once he computerized this and accepted that there was nothing he could do about it at the time; but (to) understand he could and did do something about it now.

In the session we also saw why he had a poor relationship with his father and stepmother which unconsciously relates to his pre-birth and birth and the death of his mother.

We see, as in all cases, once he took hold of himself, and reestablished communication with himself by reliving and rewriting the experience every (avenue) of communication was open for him with his father and stepmother etc.

What happened (or Changes began to happen) once he understood and the communications were opened. His stepmother called him for no reason and talked for over an hour.

Today, David is now living a normal life like all other people. (all? --or like normal people--or like those around him.)

CASE TWO:

A married couple were in group therapy. They could not see why their marriage did not go well. It was the second marriage for both.

I played the music. They wrote the images and feelings which came to them. Roger was the 10th of 11 children. Joan was the 6th of 9 children.

In Roger's images and feeling, I found it was one of aloneness, separation, and never being able to do anything right. He always had a sense of failure and doom.

In Joan's, I found also one of non-acceptance from the family.

By the power of my intuitive clairvoyant mode, I worked both together. I saw that neither one had had any love or affection from the parents.

So, I asked Roger to discuss for me what had happened to him at age 2 1/2. He said he could not remember anything. I then said: "do you remember the house you lived in?" After awhile he said "yes". I asked him to describe it to me. He did. I now said: "you are in a room, do you see yourself?" "Yes." "What happens?" "I am alone, it's dark. I want my mother and father to pick me up. I cry and there is no answer. I cry myself to sleep."

"It's been that way all my life. I never had any help from anyone. My parents never loved me, touched me or hugged me. I am like them. It is no wonder that I am not successful in my work or family."

Roger at that time, had understood, and falsely, that this was the way life was. His attitudes remained within that decision and forgot what he had done at 2 1/2. (or--forgot what his own reaction had been at 2 1/2.)

By recalling from his genetic memory the experience it helped him to understand what took place. It was also brought to light that his parents and grandparents had never received any love or attention so they could not pass it on. As far as we could see, it seemed that Roger was the third generation who suffered because they never were touched, and loved as children. Since his parents and grandparents and great grandparents never received this attention, they could not pass it on.

Once this was all brought to light, I had Roger rewrite his experience (stating) that he was a loved child. His parents were affectionate and he was affectionate towards them. Moreover, he was to write that at 2 1/2 his parents did come and care for him and gave him security.

His bio-computer accepted this and the genetic memory was informed. Roger's attitude changed and so did his life and marriage.

Joan, Roger's wife, on the other hand had the love and attention and affection of her mother, but not of her father. He was always away so there was no male communication. This also lead to Joan being raped at age 10 by 13 year old boys. She never told anyone. This had happened four times.

What Joan's genetic memory brought forth was surprising to her, her husband and to all the people there.

She saw a man pick her up. She was four or five years old. She blurred the face, but through my mode, she saw it was her father. He was alone with her. He caressed her, kissed her, and held her. Suddenly she screamed and started crying. She recalled how her father molested her and placed his finger in her vagina and the hurt.

She realized now why she reacted toward men in an unfeminine way. She saw why pain was always activated when she loved her husband. We also saw why she was raped. It was because unconsciously she wanted communication with a male and if this was the way, she sought for it.

Following my same method, Joan re-experienced the experience the correct way. The father caressed her, loved her from birth and never molested her nor harmed her. She also understood her father was ill.

In time, her attitude changed after she had computerized her information. Today Joan and her husband live a beautiful married life.

CASE III:

A doctor is always coughing. For no reason whatsoever, he begins to cough and almost chokes.

In the music, he kept seeing that he was in a dark place and that he would not be able to survive. He couldn't get out of the place. It got darker and darker.

Once again, through my intuitive clairvoyant mode, I saw the doctor's problem in the womb.

I asked him to return to the womb. He did. What was different was his hands kept pulling something from around his neck. It (??)on it. The cord was around his neck. He was coughing and choking.

"What are you pulling from around your neck?"

"A cord, a cord, I'm going to die."

"But you did not die. You are here."

"Yes, I am alive. I am in my mother's arms. I am safe."

What we found had happened was that the (attending) doctor realized the cord was around his neck so a Caesarean birth was given to the doctor. But his genetic memory still held the near-death scene and his struggle for survival.

Once he understood his experience and fear of death, he re-experienced it in the right and natural way. That is that the cord is not around the neck and that it was a natural birth and all (the problems) disappeared. The communication of the incident was corrected by sending correct information to the bio-computer.

Today the doctor has never had another incident of choking or prolonged coughing.
