CAN A PERSON PROGRAM THEIR DEATH?

Introduction:

The basic purpose for this paper is to present the results of a survey on the following questions concerning death:

1. Can a person program their own death?
2. Does this programming, done by the person, have any relationship to the paranormal?
3. Could their death be a self-fulfilled prophecy?

This is a report on a primary investigation that I have done concerning the subject. In 150 random cases of death that I have investigated, I found that 75 were reported to have died by accident; 48 died from an illness and 38 were from other causes.

It seemed that four themes ran through the information that I gathered:

First, there is strong suggestive evidence that some persons willed their death, consciously.

Second, some had done things which they had not done before, which seemed to show an unconscious sense of death.

Third, a number of the persons had premonitions about their death.

Fourth, there seems to be a strong suggestion that Psycho-Kinesis, or mind-over-matter was a factor in a number of the deaths.

Method of Research

I interviewed friends and/or relatives of the people who had died. The following are questions that I asked:

1. Did you ever hear the deceased speak about his or her own death?

2. How long before they died did they speak about it?
3. Did they mention at what age they wanted to die?
4. Did they mention the time or place of death?
5. Did they seem to know the way they would meet their death?
6. Did any of the people questioned have any premonition of the person's death?

In the 150 cases that I surveyed, I found that 97 of the deceased had spoken of wish to die. Of the deceased, 38 had given no indication that they consciously knew of their impending death, but when survivors were interviewed, they felt that there had been unusual actions by the deceased that indicated there may have been a subconscious knowledge of what awaited them.

I interviewed four hundred and thirty-eight people to obtain this information. I found that 22% of the ones that I interviewed had had a premonition of the death of the deceased. The ones who had spoken of their own deaths did so from one week to three years before their experience. Only eight spoke of the age at which they wanted to die and did so within a month to two years of that time. No one mentioned the exact time or place of death.

Sample Cases:

Case I.

A young man, for several months, kept asking his girl friend what she would do if he died. He died from a motorcycle accident within the year. When interviewing people about this case, I found that he was unhappy and was always looking for peace of mind and death would be his only answer.

Case II.

A doctor had told his friends that he would die at age 45. The reason that he felt this was because his grandfather and his father had died at that age. He died from a terminal illness at age 43.

Case III.

A woman who had been seriously ill for about three years, said that she would die after she saw her last child graduate from college. He graduated in June and she died the following October.

Case IV.

A 94 year old woman was in apparent good health. In November she called her friends to say good-bye. She said that she felt she was going to die soon. In December, she died in her sleep.

Case V.

A month before the death of Mrs. B. and her son, Mrs. B. wrote a will that said if anything should happen to her, an executor was named to care for her son who was 16 years old. In questioning her friends, I was told that she and her son had been having problems in their relationship for the past six years. But several months before, both mother and son had become reconciled and said they never wanted to be separated again. Both died in an accident together.

Case VI.

A woman's husband died after 40 years of marriage. The grief and separation was too much for her. She said she wanted to die because she wanted to be with him. She died from a heart attack one month after her husband's death.

Case VII.

A husband and wife in their mid-thirties, were noticed by friends and relatives to be very radiant and unusually exuberant. They put their house in order and said good-bye to many friends, (which was thought by friends to be very unusual), and left for a vacation. Driving on the highway, they collided with a truck which had lost control, and were both killed.

CONCLUSIONS:

In my introduction I asked three questions, now considered in turn:

1. Whether or not a person could program his or her death.

It is evident from my research that there is a significant relationship between the death-wish and the persons death. Also, it was apparent to me that the person had lost the will to live completely, providing no exit except through death.

2. Whether the person had some premonition of death or was it a self-fulfilled prophecy.

It is my conclusion that 97 of the 150 deaths were self-fulfilled prophecies or a death-wish, and that 38 of the 150 had a conscious or unconscious premonition of death. According to my research, 15 showed no evidence of a premonition or death-wish.

3. Could other areas of the paranormal also be involved in any of the above cases?

It is my contention, from my research, that Psycho-Kinesis, or mind-over-matter could have been involved unconsciously in attracting their own death. It is apparent to me that the energy field of the mind can and does induce and attract events which can bring about one's own illness and death. It is my belief that through the power of one's mind we produce PK which will attract the events that we will for ourselves, consciously or unconsciously. Fear is another very powerful energy field that has the same attractive force. It is also my belief that one can re-program through the mind this PK so that these events will be less likely to happen.

In conclusion it is evident to me that we create our own realities through the power of the mind and that all events have a relationship to our conscious or unconscious beliefs.
