

RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN HEALING AND SURVIVAL

There is another area which very few people seem to consider when they are considering survival, which is again part of my writing:

I found in my personal experience of survival another dimension which we have rarely taken into consideration--that survival means that we have as individuals the ability for a holistic balance, therefore, survival also is an act of creating healing of the self and by creating healing of the self, it is a survival and, therefore, a perfection. It also raises the perfection of the universe. In my experience of survival I saw what I can only call, in that experience, a holistic expression or holistic experience, (again the word) and which we are all part of. By holistic here I mean, that each part of us also contains the whole of us, therefore, in our healing of the parts we are also healing the whole, and in that way we must understand survival. It gives an inner-balance of one part and of all the parts that are within us.

I say inner-balance because survival is a bridging of consciousness or the bridging consciousness and in the experience of healing which is bridging consciousness to a degree also, we are treating or preventing an illness, or keeping whole, ourselves, therefore, we are giving a wholeness to each one of us by the relationship of our energy, and to the whole universe, and, therefore, raising everything towards its destiny. Each one of us, by our act of bridging consciousness, we prevent and heal, as I have said. As we are in this act or this experience, this creativity of bridging consciousness, we share in the survival of each one of us existing and all that have existed, and this survival is a Oneness.

As we achieve our inner peace in life, we are achieving survival of the one and the many. When I speak of survival the vision extends far more than individual survival and far beyond just the bodily survival--there is extension beyond which our senses cannot feel, see, or touch.

I learned to have a sense of meaning in my experience of survival--cosmic meaning--as both person and individual and the universe is bridging consciousness. It is opening itself to me and I open myself to it and then I go beyond the center of the immediate consciousness into what I call the divine mystery. And here I understand--I see that which is Oneness.

This is why the "Alex II" experiment only scratched the surface of this understanding that I have of survival. The understanding of the hologram experience enters into the very core of survival as I see it, because embedded in it is also the survival of healing. One dimension of Jesus, which He teaches of survival is that of healing, but the healing must be understood--this healing experience in life, work, death and resurrection of Jesus which is together the survival experience--so it is with us. From Him we have been able to learn and to understand and to open up to the energy of God, as He had touched Him so has He touched each one of us. Our survival and our healing energy must touch all and to heal is to make perfect. To make perfect means "no end" and, therefore, survival.

We are seeing here the bridging of consciousness between healing and survival which extends now to survival beyond this life that we live in and the healing beyond the life that we are in here now. As it is said, wholeness is wellness, so must we understand in survival. A holistic living is a holistic healing and a holistic healing is the holistic survival of the individual.

I use the word individual so frequently instead of person, because everything becomes One. When I understand person, I understand of the multitude of personalities that a person has, but in the individual, all of this becomes a harmony and this is when we become an individual; which means that we are more than a person. We lose nothing of our personality.

To enter into the glory of God, I must be made whole. This needs a healing. In bridging consciousness, I found that many who had transcended have a very hard time in becoming whole or holiness or wholeness, or spiritual. We as individuals are able to help them by sending our consciousness and our healing to them. This is what prayer and meditation is all about. They are able to receive it, whether universally or individually. And those who have transcended, they also can help; (the higher--the lower evolved), in the bridging of consciousness. They can help the lower and, therefore, are helping each other and are helping raise the survival of the universe.

In experiencing Jesus, I found and discovered (and so are others making that same discovery and using the power that is within us.), that the greatest of all these powers is the creative power of healing, because it is the power of survival. But this must be understood, in the ever-growing awareness of bridging consciousness. This power is manifested in us from the very beginning of time and in the evolution. We can understand the leaps if we understand the meaning of the bio-computer that we are. It bridges and brings forth all experiences, therefore, what I am talking about here is something which is so great that really what we are doing in our bridging of consciousness is healing and healing is survival. In this bridging consciousness it is not one person alone or one individual alone; it is collective. As in God there is Father, Son and Spirit--a community, so are we sharers of all the community--for we are all one, and we are the Sons of God.
